Jacksons' Universal

Washing Compound.

THIS last great labor saving invention now being introduced everywhere. A fair trial will convince the most sceptical, no wash board necessary. Three-fourths in money, time, and labor saved by its use.—It will not injure fabrics of any kind, and needs a want long felt in household. Will remove paint, grease or stains, holds chapped hands, restores and beautifies the skin. It is the cheapest and cleanly article, costing far less than soap, and is superior to the best of soaps. It is meeting with the greatest favor wherever introduced. Persons will be supplied with family rights for building and making it, by the Agent, J. Kirkland. The Compound will be left for sale at the Stores of Mr. S. C. Hanson, Water St., Rochester; L. F. Krieger, North Bridgewater; and H. B. Anderson, Beaver. Orders for Family Rights may be left at the boarding House of S. S. Anderson, near the point, Rochester, or sent by mail, enclosing $1.00 to J. Kirkland, Rochester, Pa.

DRIVING HOME THE COWS.

Out of the clover and blue-eyed grass,
He turned them into the river-lane;
One after another he let them pass,
Then fastened the meadow bars again.

Under the willows and over the hill,
He patiently followed their sober pace.
The merry whistle for once was still,
And something shadowed the sunny face.

Only a boy; and his father had said
He never could let the youngest go;
Two already were lying dead
Under the feet of the trampling foe.

But after the evening work was done,
And the frogs were loud in the meadow-swamp,
Over his shoulder he slung his gun,
And stealthily followed the foot-path damp,—

Across the clover and through the wheat,
With resolute heart and purpose grim,
Though cold was the dew on his harrying feet,
And the blind bats flitting startled him.

Thrice since then had the lanes been white,
And the orchards sweet with apple-bloom;
And now, when the cows came back at night,
The feeble father drove them home.

For news had come to the lonely farm
That three were lying where two had lain;
And the old man's trembling, palsied arm
Could never lean on a son's again.

The summer day grew cool and late;
He went for the cows when the work was done;
But down the lane, as he opened the gate,
He saw them coming, one by one,—

Brindle, Ebony, Speckle, and Bess,
Shaking their horns in the evening wind,
Cropping the buttercups out of the grass—
But who was it following close behind?

Loosely swung in the idle air
The empty sleeve of army blue;
And worn and pale, from the crisping hair,
Looked out a face that the father knew:—

For Southern prisons will sometimes yawn,
And yield their dead unto life again;
And the day that comes with a cloudy dawn
In golden glory at last may wane.

The great tears sprang to their meeting eyes;
For the heart must speak when the lips are dumb;
And under the silent evening skies
Together they followed the cattle home.

BABY ON THE PORCH.

Out on the porch by the open door,
Sweet with roses and cool with shade,
Baby is creeping over the floor—
Dear little winsome, blue-eyed maid:

All about her the shadows dance,
All above her the roses swing;
Sunbeams in the lattice glance,
Robins up in the branches sing.

Up at the blossoms her fingers reach,
Lisping her pleading in broken words;
Cooing away, in her tender speech,
Songs like the twitter of nestling birds.

Creeping, creeping over the floor,
Soon my birdie will find her wings,
Fluttering out at the open door
Into the wonderful world of things.

[The following interesting letter was received a few days ago by Dr. O. Nicholson of Freedom, Pa., from a relative now traveling in Europe.]

ARNHEM, HOLLAND, Sept. 1st 1867.

DR. OSCAR NICHOLSON—Dear Cousin: I commence writing you a letter, but do not know what day it will be finished, so much time is taken up in sight seeing and traveling.

I had a safe and pleasant voyage over the water on the Iron propeller "Bavaria." I had but little sea sickness, none after the second day—the dutch doctor on board giving me a double dose of Seidlitz powders. To describe the exposition at Paris, (that is the great sight) would be to write the history of all nations. I stayed a month there, and yet at least twenty times to what the Frenchmen calls the "Expoizoshaun," and still did not see all, and I forget half of what I did see. I remember one piece of English wrought iron, fifty-four feet long, three and a half feet wide and eight and a third inches thick. I measured it myself. It was a finished slab. There were other large pieces also, machinery without end, articles from all parts of the world. One looking glass twenty by thirteen feet, paintings as large as that, some very fine.—There was weaving of table cloths and other handsome things. Spinning of silk and other kinds of threads going on, and indeed hundreds of articles were being manufactured by machinery. You may recollect the size of the building, sixteen hundred by twelve hundred and forty-five feet, oval shaped, small area in the centre. It was full, but that was not all. Outside there was a model farm and model garden taking up several acres. There were ranges of stables for horses and cattle. The Russian horses made the greatest show. There were model houses from various parts, all large enough to live in. There were three full sized light houses, one all iron, about one hundred and fifty feet high. They were to be taken to the sea coast and set up for use. You have read, however, more than I can tell you. On July 24th I left Paris for Geneva in company with Mr. William Coleman and Mr. John Shipton, both of Pittsburgh. You may know them. Coleman was of the firm of Coleman, Hailman & Co. Shipton was a merchant. We have been together ever since. Mr. S. speaks the French fluently and knows a good deal of the German—is a clever fellow. So you see I was fortunate in falling in with them. Just now we have a courier employed, as the language of the Hollanders is enough to break one's jaws, even if they did understand. Geneva, as you know, has many historical associations. I seen the house John Calvin died in, after spending the last twenty-eight years of his life in this place. His grave cannot now be identified. Went up the north side of the Lake three miles to Voltaire's chateau. House and grounds have been added to a lovely spot now owned by a Mr. Davis, but his reception room, where his vanity was often flattered by visits of Ambassadors, Kings and Queens, and his sleeping rooms with their furniture are preserved as he left them. In the first room against the wall, is a mausoleum said to contain his heart. It is a handsome piece of marble work, about five feet high. On the wall above it is the inscription in French, but translated, "My remains derive consolation since my heart remains in your midst," and on the cenotaph "His spirit is everywhere, his heart is here." Portraits (engraved) of Washington and Franklin and others of his friends are hanging in the sleeping room. [illegible] and on his stomach, but it and all the other furniture substantial. Both child's chair [illegible] by. Drove to the gate which like those about the Tuilleries in Paris is of iron, with the spear on top, and was told by the [illegible] where to obtain tickets of admission to the grounds. We concluded to let the "richest man in the world" and his grounds alone, [illegible] keeper to astonish others with his [illegible] new breeches, white stockings, [illegible] blue coat, with brass buttons, and cocked hat.

"Byron's cruise," so called, is in sight over the lake. Which is it. It is a large furnished house, for [illegible] Milton once occupied it, afterwards Byron, where in 1816 he composed Manfred [illegible] Canto of Childe Harold. I used the writing table to take some notes on but did not imitate the style of Childe Harold—[illegible] independent for that.—John Knox the [illegible] reformer is shown by the records of the couriers of State to have arrived at Geneva [illegible] 14th 1557. Calvin died in 1564, after doing so much to elevate the place in theology [illegible] renown.

Borne, trout of [illegible] Bear. You see bears in shape of toys, pictures, and all other shapes, all around the city. They have a pit with six live ones [illegible] and a clock in a high church steeple that every time it strikes turns out a circle of bears. Wood carvings plenty and beautiful. Bought or got made, a hundred chips. I enclose you one. Box and all cost eleven francs.

To go back to Geneva. I went out without my friends to "Mont Blanc," (fifty miles) I started in a Diligence. You should see a Diligence. Thirty passengers, driver and conductor. Prices of seats vary. The "coupee" that is the front seat on the lower story being the highest priced. Your ticket locates your seat and you must keep it. Six horses, three abreast, go like [illegible]. Such cracking of whips, everything [illegible] the track for the Diligence. Luckily I met with a man who could speak English and French, or I would have been left at the [illegible] stand thirty-five miles out, where they [illegible] the passengers into small conveyances to go up and down the steep roads in the valley of the river Arve.

Chamonix, a town in the valley near the base of the monarch of the Alps, Mount Blanc and his satelites. Here [illegible] to see hundreds of voyagers, ladies and [illegible] with their iron shod staffs and some with [illegible] shod shoes to climb the mountains. Other [illegible] mules and horses. The ladies' saddles [illegible] a breast girth, crupper, breech band, and a hoop around from the horn to the back part of the saddle about a foot high. Mount Blanc. The apex is over fourteen thousand feet above the bed of the sea, and over twelve thousand above the valley. It is shaped like a sugar loaf, with a [illegible] upward in the [illegible] different views of it at a distance. Thirty or forty miles off what is called Mount Blanc from a long distance, covered with eternal snow, in places a hundred feet deep. The Alps are all rock, covered with the fir and birch trees as far up as vegetation extends and where there is any soil at all. They are all peaked. Some places where the clouds have hidden all but the upper parts you see a cluster of peaks that look something like a lot of church steeples or something so portentious that they do not seem to belong to earth.

In this region we meet with the "Savoy cows." They are small, eat but little, give a good deal of milk, wake up travellers in the morning as they are going out to pasture.

Bells, oval-shaped, large enough for a country church, hanging on straps from four to eight inches, wide iron buckles to match. The goats are valuable. They give a large quantity of milk of which cheese is made. Invalids, too, buy and drink the milk. It is not easy to make out my own notes, so I skip to Intiluked. Here met Dr. D. and family, of Cincinnati, stopping at the Jungfrau hotel in sight of the mountain of that name, always covered with snow. I drove out four hours, which means twelve miles, to the "Glacier de Grindelvald," was carried about a mile down and around declivities to the glacier and back by two men in an arm chair fixed for the purpose (cost ten francs.) Went into an excavation in the glacier a hundred and eighty feet through clear solid ice. At the end was a room ten feet square, in which was a woman singing a Tyrolese song and playing on a curious stringed instrument, (all for a sou.) The excavation which is just like a coal bank is about four feet wide and seven feet high.—Where the roof is not too thick some light is admitted and we can see. The ice is solid and clear. The sides are dark, being so extensive. In two places there is a deviation from a straight line. Lamps are placed there, also at the end. About a hundred yards to the left of the entrance there issues a stream of water (just visible here) under the arch of ice, and nearly filling it, as large as a good sized creek at its highest flood. It must commence somewhere up amongst the eternal snow. It goes clearly dry in Winter. As you look up the glacier you see bristles of ice from fifty to a hundred feet high above the surface, if any of it can be called a surface, it is so uneven. There is an unexplained mystery about the glaciers. This one does not differ from others, except it is larger than many of them. Here it is and has been for ages, and presenting at all times nearly the same appearance. It is a mile in length, following the windings of the ravine away up to the everlasting snow. The lower end wastes away in the warmer air of the valley, yet the glacier maintains its character and length all the way down. Can it be possible that ice, like pitch oozing from a barrel, can accomodate itself to crooked, shelving and rocky ravines, and yet be compact and solid and firm at the lower extremity? That it is solid and firm at the lower end is witnessed by thousands every year.

But to drop philosophising and skip to "Dusseldorf." I am to night, Sept. 2d, in this city. I have just returned from witnessing a contest between clubs of singers from the country all around. Prussia is famous for music. I have no room or time to describe the interest the people take in music, and [illegible] enjoyments of every kind. To night there was at least a thousand people, half of them ladies, and many of them of the aristocratic class, listening to the singing, drinking wine and beer outside in a decimated space of at least two acres. Scheidam.—This is where a large amount of pure "Holland gin" is made. To post you on gin, there are three hundred and fifty-five distilleries in this place, and thirty-six wind mills to grind the rye and barley, of which gin is made. There are other machines, also, for grinding. Exactly equal portions of these grains are used. They put it through several processes according to the proof wanted. For their friends at a long distance, when freight is costly, they make the gin ninety per cent above proof.—It is something like alcohol. I tasted some of the pure stuff, dipped from a tank under the floor that would hold about a thousand barrels. They do not flavor it here; they let their customers do that to suit themselves.—You know juniper berries are used for that purpose. Yeast is made from the residue of the grain. It is pressed first in thick close sacks, to get the water out, then put into box presses to make it more compact. Then dried and shipped off. The largest quantities go to England. "Amsterdam."—Prominent features, wooden clogs, thick woolen stockings with occasionally holes in the heels (these clogs are hard on stockings.) A little more prominent are the wind mills, (there are at least five hundred in the city and in sight of it) and the six, seven and eight story houses that lean over the narrow streets are prominent too, (there is a law against building them so now.) One to three feet is gained in the depth of a high house at the top.—The city is cut up into two hundred and fifty islands by the canals—ships, steamers and water craft of all kinds all through it. Families live in the boats. It is very common to see women steering, handling sail, and adjusting rigging up the shrouds about the cross trees.

"Dairy."—A few miles out from Amsterdam, where the wind mills drain the country by pumping the water from the ditches into a river that is levied and carried out through the dikes to the sea. We stopped to look at a dairy. We first entered the cows' apartment—not a bit of stable smell, the cows being kept out in Summer. The stalls and the walls were all ornamented and lined round with plates and saucers (Liverpool ware) the floors covered with pebbles and small shells arranged in figures, (dutch taste) a mahogany side board (old style) and some other pieces of furniture. The next room held the tanks of milk and whey, and the presses. The next room was the drying room. The cheese were some globular, others nearly so. When dry, and ready for use they weighed twenty-four pounds. This dairy makes six per day. We went up stairs, a young girl leading us into the family rooms; they were well furnished, handsome ornaments and some good pictures. A flight of three mahogany steps stood against the wall in one of the rooms, over them were curtains. I took the liberty of opening them, and here in a recess was a very fine bed: it looked inviting, if there was only some air and light admitted. It stood about four feet from the floor. At the bureau was a clean towel to stand on; so at the room door over a mat to step on, and so under the looking-glass to stand on. This is an ancient custom, kept up as our courier informed us, by many of the private families. Over all these rooms was the hay for the cows. The roof being steep, would hold a good deal. So here, as in almost all the country we travelled through, the family, cows, goats, mules, hay, grain and even wood pile are sheltered under one roof.

"Hoofdyzer."—I will bet you a trifle you cannot come within a mile of its meaning. It is pronounced "Hoofdiser," but no matter for that, a Philadelphia lawyer would not know what it was without coming to Holland. It is what may be called a lady's shield. At another town, "Zaandam," a few miles off, we stopped in a bazaar, and the lady proprietress had on her "hoofdiser." I bought a vial two hundred years old, made in Japan when Holland had the monopoly of trade with that nation. The vial is a wonderful curiosity, but it may have been made in Amsterdam, or some other dam (they are plenty here) within the last two weeks. It destroys the poetry to doubt—so we must believe. Well, the courier, at my request, persuaded the lady to take off her "hoofdyzer," and let me examine it.—They are all made of either pure gold or pure silver; sometimes in parts of each metal.—This one was all gold and cost, as the lady informed me, a hundred and twenty dollars. It is about as thick as this paper, two and a half inches wide, fits the head round behind, coming on each side near to the eyes. This one was held on by two long ornamented pins being thrust through false curls, caps and shield. Over the shield a cap of thin lace is worn that surrounds the forehead.—Some of these "hoofdyzers" are so broad as to cover nearly all the head; some have bands or chains across the forehead to keep them on. Roses and flowers of all sorts, made of gold, are attached to the "dyzer." However we may laugh at all this, I do not know any thing that sets off a handsome lady's face better than the "hoofdyzer."

"Leyden," where the jars of that name originated, has the largest and best "museum of natural curiosities" in Europe. The upper story is filled with skeletons, from a whale down to the smallest insect. The two lower ones with beasts, birds, fish and in my opinion, many more creeping and flying things than Noah had in his museum. To be sure these are stuffed. One duck came from Columbus, Ohio. A student could study through the greater portion of his life in this institution of natural history, and then come out a natural fool, by which is meant no reflection on anatomists, but that it would not be profitable in a pecuniary way.

"Dog carts."—All over the country the faithful dog pulls all the time. No whip is required, and if an outside idle dog insults him or threatens him, his duty to his driver, which is nearly always a woman, prevents retaliation. Sometimes as many of six dogs in a cart, always abreast, the woman often holding the cart behind, assisting up hill and down hill.—The milk cart dogs are interesting. They know their beat. Whilst the woman is delivering the measure of milk at one house, the dog starts off to the next, across the street or whereever it may be. The harness looks to be heavy, and the carts too.

The horses—you never saw such draft horses as they have all through the country. They are of the Norman and Flemish breed.

These people are ahead of us in many ways, particularly the important ones. In others we think they are behind us; we are sure they are. As food and clothing are the essentials of life, they will be first noticed. They have better food and are always better clothed.—You see no ragged people. The poorest boys or men with patches on their breeches not corresponding in either color or kind, are always clean and comfortable. They work; they make dogs, donkeys and cows work. You will see cows ploughing and often milked in the harness. They have better roads, and in Switzerland, Baden and Belgium, no toll-gates. They have better horses, hant larger loads, and do not have to labor so hard in loading and unloading, because their vehicles are closer to the ground. A dray, as we may call it, has four wheels; the bed is not more than a foot from the ground. It is long and turns up over the axles and the Flemish horses can pull all they can put on. The dray and harness are very heavy. If I could draw any thing besides the horses load, or carts, I would give you a picture of the horse, dray and load.

"Destitution." We are all mistaken about this prevailing in the countries spoken of, (how it is in England and Ireland I do not know); the people are happy. They have their music, dancing and enjoyment generally. Their moral condition is better. It is probable that I have seen more than a million of people at the various gatherings and through the country, and not a single fight, and but one drunk man, and he was able to keep on his feet. Yet they drink more than we do, but it is of wine or beer, their wives and sisters mixing with them. It is no uncommon thing for a lady or ladies, to go with their children into a restaurant and call for their wine or coffee, bread and butter, &c. Most of them do all their eating in restaurants. It is cheaper than to do their cooking at home, fuel being so scarce. The rich ladies dress with more taste than ours do, and the poor with more cleanliness and comfort. A good deal of formality is observed amongst the fashionables and politeness among all classes. You meet a stranger on the street, and four out of five will lift his hat—you, of course, are expected to do the same. [illegible] the first thing after lifting his hat is "pardonnez monsieur," and if he finds that you cannot speak his language, he bows gracefully and passes on.

In Switzerland the women carry their marketing and packages in baskets, water-tight vessels of an oval shape lashed on their backs reaching often above their heads; pretty much so in Belgium. In Holland they use the bucket on the head. At Intiluked I seen a Swiss woman doling out hot water from this vessel to two or three washerwomen without taking it off her back, or in the least drabbling her garments.

There is a good deal trouble to keep the run of the valuables of their different coins, Florins, guilders, stivers, thalers &c. We do not stay long enough in one State, and out of it you cannot pass their copper or nickel coins. The five franc silver or gold pieces, indeed all the French gold pieces, pass all around, but in Holland at a discount.

To tell you the way travelers do to have command of their funds, and to be secure against robbery to any extent. In New York (where I got mine) and in other cities, they buy a letter of credit. That is one way, and the way I did. Brown, Brothers & Co. (with whom I dealt) took my greenbacks at the current rate for gold, gave me a draft on Brown, Shipley & Co., of London, for the proceeds, charging ten per cent. exchange. This letter is addressed to something like a hundred bankers throughout Europe and other parts of the world, assuring the payment of any amount. I may draw for on Brown, Shipley & Co., up to the date specified in the letter.—The letter bears my signature and it has water marks that those bankers all know. That assures them the letter is no forgery, and my signature that I am the proper holder. So at any of those towns or cities I go with my letter, and say I want ten, fifteen or twenty pounds. He is very obliging (he charges generally two and a half per cent. for advancing) I give him my draft on Brown, Shipley & Co. He marks on the blank page of the letter the amount he has paid with his signature.

When I am ready to leave for home I call on Brown, Shipley & Co., in London, or any of their agents, and settle my account. I will be allowed interest on the money advanced in New York, that is, on the nett amount in gold after deducting exchange, and will be charged interest on all the draft amounts drawn for. All is expensive, and to see sights we must pay for the music. Eight to ten dollars per day is required when travelling with a courier and paying carriage rides, "pour boire" which means "drink money" in English, but called "poor boy." All the waiters, hackmen, &c., particularly in France, expect the "poor boy" a few sous. The hackman, if you have him for several hours, expects a franc in addition to his lawful charge, two francs per hour. If you do not give it to him you get a sound cursing.

I give you the bill of fare for dinner at the first class hotels where they have a Table D'Hote. For dinner—soup, fish, beef and potatoes, hare, sweet-bread, veal, chicken and lettuce, pears and fruit cake, and melon.—Plates changed every time. You cannot order anything else, but you are not obliged to eat more than you choose, and it is considered unmannerly to leave the table before you get down, at least, to peas and fruit take.

I send you a few pictures like the one below. To put them on a paper, plates of pitcher, cut them as you choose, have the surface clean, lay the picture face downwards, wet the back, dry it with a handkerchief, keeping the picture paper in its place; then peal off the paper without sliding it, and you have the impression. I bought about five hundred in Holland and here. They cost about three cents each. Some are gilt, but they are great curiosities. I would send you something else, but letters that feel like containing anything dutiable are apt to be detained.

My health is exceedingly good. This country and those travels seem to agree with me. I think of staying all winter—a part of the cold weather in Italy, if the cholera disappears.

Believe me, as ever, yours,
JOHN HAGARTY.

Brownlow's Inaugural Address.

Governor Brownlow, was inaugurated at Nashville, on the 10th inst. He appeared in the House of Representatives and took the oath of office. The inaugural was read by his private secretary. In it he expresses his gratitude for the honor of a second election by a larger majority than ever given any Governor, but regards it as a triumph of the principles represented in his nomination rather than a personal victory. He paid the Republican party a compliment, saying that it was the orgauization controlled by men up with the advanced ideas of the times, and guarding with a jealous eye the preservation of the Union. He spoke of Northern men settling in the State, and said: "I have witnessed with regret in different localities of the State, a disposition to proscribe Northern men and drive them from the country. I do not enter into this spirit, nor will I administer the executive branch of the State Government upon any such principle. If men are good enough to come to Tennessee and encounter the cold and heat, mud and rain of our climate, and face rebel bullets in putting down the rebellion, they are good enough when qualified to fill offices of honor and trust. We want Northern capital and Northern enterprise, and to get this I for one am willing to take a fair proportion of Northern politicians; but I yield to no man in my contempt for that class of Northern men who come among us, and for sake of position and patronage, abandon their honest sentiments, and become rebel sympathizers." The inaugural concluded as follows: "Imploring for your guidance the favor of Almighty God, which is never withheld from law makers whose cause is just, shaped solely by the commands of heaven, them of right end, duty, in conclusion, with a sentiment, which I trust may inspire our [illegible] the union of the Republican party for the cause of the Union.

The Influence of Newspapers.

Daniel Webster once remarked—"Small is the sum that is required to patronize a newspaper, and amply rewarded is its patron. I care not how humble and unpretending the gazette which he takes. It is next to impossible to fill a sheet with printed matter without putting in it something that is worth the subscription price. Every parent whose son is away from home at school should supply him with a newspaper. I well remember what a marked difference between those of my school-mates who had and those who had not access to newspapers. Other things being equal the first were always superior to the last in debate, composition and intelligence."

WE have read many amusing specimens of soldier wit during the war, but good as any we have seen was the reply of a Virginia cavalryman to a North Carolina infantry man. It was on the march to Adairsville, in November 1863—a cold, bright morning, while the troops were lying along the road, waiting for obstacles to be removed in front—a fellow came jogging down the line on an old flea-bitten frame of a horse. As he passed one chap greeting him with "I say, mistur, you are mity like a brother ov mine the hogs ate up." The cavalryman did not relax a muscle, but looking "Tar Heel" straight in the face, replied: "Wal, my friend, 'tis a monstrous pity tha hadn't finished the family while tha was a eatin'," and moved on amid shouts of laughter.

A PETITION asking Congress to impeach and remove Andrew Johnson is being circulated in New York. General Sigel is one of signers; so is Wendell Phillips, General Walbridge, Wm. C. Bryant and Henry Ward Beecher.

SOME men are like cats; you may stroke the tail the right way for many years, and hear nothing but purring; but accidentally tread on the tail, and all memory of the former kindness is obliterated.

The Beaver Argus.

T. F. WEYAND, Editor and Proprietor.

Beaver, Pa., October 23, 1867.

The returns from the several counties in the State of the vote polled for Supreme Judge on Tuesday, 8th inst, were opened at Harrisburg yesterday. Judge Sharswood received 267,746, and Judge Williams 266, 824 leaving a majority for Sharswood, Democrat, of 922.

It will be remembered that during the campaign, the State Central Commitee of the Union party, offered a large, fine banner to the county which would poll the best vote for Judge Williams, compared with the vote given to General Geary last year. Perry county, it appears, is to receive the flag, having increased its majority from 86 for Geary to 135 for Williams.

The result of the election in this District for Representatives in the Legislature, is as as follows:

	Beaver Co.	Washington Co.
Nicholson, U,	2,774	4,607
Day, U,	2,813	4,570
Ewing, U,	2,810	4,597
Wilde, D,	2,294	4,510
McKinley, D,	2,267	4,541
Pollock, D,	2,247	4,485

These figures show Mr. Nicholson to have a majority of 577 in the District.

Gen. Grant will more than likely be the next Union candidate for the Presidency. The country papers almost everywhere are beginning to hoist his name, and it is only a few days ago that the Union State committee of Ohio, have resolved that he is their choice for that office. Grant for President, and Senator Wilson of Massachusetts, or E. M. Stanton of this State for vice President, would make a ticket that would sweep every State that went for Lincoln in 1864.

A letter of the Hon. Henry W. Williams, late Republican candidate for Supreme Judge, to the editor of the Press, dated Pittsburg, October 12th, contains the following good counsel:

"Instead of being discouraged, the loyal citizens should gird up their loins for next year's Presidential contest, resolved on victory; and if true to themselves and the principles for which they made such sacrifices of blood and treasure, they will assuredly succeed."

Mrs. Lincoln has returned to her home from New York, whither she had gone to dispose of her wardrobe under the plea of necessity. She was persuaded to do so by the personal friends of her husband, and left without disposing of her fine shawls, diamond rings, &c., &c, they promising to raise her a fund by voluntary contributions sufficient to supply her with the comforts of life. Since then, however, the administrator of the estate of Mr. Lincoln, David Davis, Esq., comes forward with a statemsnt certified on oath, alleging that Mr. Lincoln's estate was worth $85,000 besides the $25,000 donated by Congress. This statement made her worth $110,000 two years ago. Now, what has she done with this large sum of money, is a question that a great many people will ask? and we take it that a plausible answer must be returned before the American people will contribute very much more to her "relief."

[illegible] in this County in 1862, but are informed by those who were, that the rejoicings of the Democracy after the elections that year were similar in almost every respect to their shoutings and fantastic performances of the present time. Then the Republican reverses were keenly felt by all who were alive to the perils of the hour. In this State the friends of the Government were beaten several thousand on their State ticket. In addition to this they lost the Legislature and the successful party gave us Buckalew for United States Senator. We also lost three Congressional Districts, which made our representatives in Congress stand: Fourteen Democrats and ten Republicans.

In Ohio the Republicans suffered almost as much as we did in Pennsylvania. The Democrats elected their State ticket by a majority of six or seven thousand, and what was worse still they gained from us seven members of Congress, making the Congressional deligation from that State stand: Democrats fourteen and Republicans five.

In Indiana they beat us, and secured a majority of the Representatives in Congress.—They also carried the Legislature, and elected Hendricks to the U. S. Senate.

Illinois went with the tide, gave a majority against us of twenty thousand, electing nine Democrats out of the eleven Representatives in Congress and that party having also carried the Legislature, gave us a Democratic U. S. Senator in the person of Wm. A. Richardson.

New Jersey was likewise lost to us, the State going Democratic by a majority bordering on fourteen thousand. The Legislature went overwhelmingly Democratic, gave us a Democratic U. S. Senator, and that party also succeeded in securing four out of the five Representatives in Congress.

New York did no better. Soymour, a bitter malignant copperhead was chosen Governor by a majority of ten thousand, and seventeen out of the thirty-one members of Congress were of the same political complexion. Nor did our disasters end here. Fate appeared everywhere to be against us. Where we did not lose the elections outright, our majorities were very much decreased. Our lines seemed broken at all points. But the Republicans were not dismayed. Trusting in the righteousness of their cause, they went to work, re-formed their lines, repaired the damage sustained, moved forward their columns, and the next year saw them not only the masters of the field, but their lately victorious opponents flying in confusion before them. Not only that, but at every election of general importance since then until the present fall, they have been beaten, routed, scattered and demoralized.

History is said to repeat itself. What followed the elections of 1862, will follow the elections of 1867. The damage sustained by the Republican party this year is not half so severe as it was then. The losses are more apparent than real; and we have only to do now as we did then—buckle on the armor anew, move forward to the conflict again with a steady step, and as sure as justice sooner or later prevails, that certain is our success in the elections that are to follow.

The Lost Cause men of Middlesex county, New Jersey have nominated a man as their candidate for the State Legislature, who served as Colonel in the rebel army. He will in all probability secure every Democratic vote in that county. Jeff Davis' prospects as the next candidate of the Democratic party for President are unquestionably brightening with every turn of the political wheel. He appears now to be the coming man!

The Republicans of Ohio are in good spirits, and their watchword is "no steps backward!" They learned long ago that the Confederates often win in the first day of battle, but never fail to get a good flogging in the third day's fight.

At an election held in Mexico a short time ago, a majority of the electors chosen, were instructed to vote for Juarez for President of the Republic. If he succeeds in maintaining order in that country during his term of office, he will accomplish more than is now expected by a great many observing people.

Take Your Choice.

"Occasional" says of the States which have gone Democratic:

"We should undertake to bring them back to duty, with California to boot, simply by honestly defending and bravely sticking to our principles.

We will take the colored man by the hand and ask our countrymen to decide between him and the white traitor.

The Black Patriot or the White Traitor—which do you choose?

The Blair family have latterly been swarming about the White House. Not content, however, with running that "machine," one of them, Montgomery, went over to the War Department one day last week, and asked Gen. Grant to re-instate a clerk who had been recently dismissed. The request was not complied with, whereupon Blair declared that the ex-clerk could probably be re-instated if it was not known that he was a Democrat. He was told that parties had nothing to do with the question—that the young man's services were not needed, and therefore the question would admit of no argument.

Judge Thurman, the defeated candidate for Governor of Ohio, attended a Democratic jubilee in Allegheny city on last Saturday night. He made the leading speech on the occasion, and it is said to have been nothing more nor less than a tissue of inaccuracies and misrepresentations. His party friends, are alleged even to have been ashamed of his effort on the occasion.

The election for delegates to a State Convention was held in Virginia yesterday. We have not heard the result, but feel inclined to doubt the success of our party friends in the contest. The conservatives were united, well organized and hopeful since the recent elections; while the Republicans were divided among themselves, and considerably discouraged in view of the Democratic victories on the 8th of October.

We have received a communication from Baden over the signature of "A Women," which we decline to publish from the fact that she has not furnished us with her real name. Will correspondents never learn that their names must accompany their communications in order to insure their insertion. The name is not wanted for publication, but merely to let the editor know who the writer is.

The Cops by out-generaling the Republicans most handsomely, getting out almost their entire vote, have a beggarly majority of six or eight hundred in the State. What chance will they have in a contest in which the Republicans get out their vote. A friend used to illustrate matters of this kind by saying "about as much chance as a cat in tophet without claws."—Belford Inquirer.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of Monday last brings forward the name of George H. Pendleton as the choice of the Lost Cause men of Ohio for President in 1868. It makes a long argument in favor of his being their candidate and claims that if he is put upon a platform embracing "the same currency for the bondholder that the people are compelled to receive the prompt payment of the public debt as it falls due in the legal tender of the nation," he will "sweep Ohio by 50,000 majority, and also the country, as we did with Franklin Pierce in 1852, when the conqueror of Mexico, Gen. Scott, was the candidate of the opposition." What bombast do Lost Cause editors at this particular time not indulge in?

The Contested Elections in Philadelphia.

On Friday in the Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia, Wm. B. Mann, Esq., filed three separate petitions protesting against Wm. A. Leech, Joseph Megary and General John F. Ballier, being allowed to occupy and perform the duties of the offices of Register of Wills, Clerk of Orphans' Court and City Commissioner respectively. The petitions, after a general allegation of fraud, set forth that—

"The election officers in said divisions falsely and fraudulently permitted and suffered a large number of persons, not qualified voters of said divisions, to vote at said election to the number of 1,949 and upwards, whose votes were taken and counted in the general return for said offices whose names were not on the list furnished by the City Commissioners to the election officers, without requiring or receiving proof of the qualifications of said voters, and without requiring or receiving proof by a qualified elector of their residence in said divisions of said voters, and without adding the names of said voters with the names of the persons making proof to the list furnished by the City Commissioners. They falsely and fraudulently permitted a large number of persons, to the number of 411 and upwards, not qualified to vote in said divisions whose votes were taken and counted in the general return for the said office of City Commissioner, whose names are to your petitioners unknown, who voted in the names of those who were upon the list furnished by the City Commissioner to the election officers of said divisions."

Other instances of fraud are alleged, and twenty-four election divisions in the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Eighth, Seventeenth, and Twenty-fifth wards are recited, in which 1,949 persons voted who were not qualified and 411 in the names of others. These figures it is said, have been arrived at by actual count, and when proved to the satisfaction of the Court will show that Messrs. Campbell, Batters and Urwiler, Republicans, have been elected to the above offices by majorities of 833, 684 and 481 respectively. If the contestants succeed in proving these frauds, and secure their offices, as it is claimed they will then Judge Williams' election to the Supreme Bench will necessarily follow.

"THE FELLOW OF BEAVER FALL."

Response to the Local Editor.

Editor Argus—Sir: The Local dead or alive continues to bark! and would feign pursuade his readers that he knows something about geology. He reminds me of an ancient wrestler and orator that when prostrated by his antagonist in the Olympic games, he would arise and affirm the contrary with such vehemence, and argue it with such skill as to pursuade his hearers that he had not been thrown though they saw with their own eyes. Poor Odell's last article forcibly reminds me of the anecdote.

He informs his readers that I "have heretofore given proof that I know nothing of the science it must be certain that I am incompetent to conduct an argument upon the origin of the universe &c." Is it possible that the readers of the Local are so stupid and ignorant that they are not capable of judging for themselves, cannot the Local's subscribers read? It belongs to his readers to decide whether I am competent to conduct the argument or not. But the Local seems to think their relation to the subject is very different.—He is not only a would be disputant, but sets himself to be judge and jury also, and the way he lords over his assumptions shows that his ipse dixit is the end of all controversy.

Now I must be allowed to remind the Local editor's ghost, that he is judge in his matter only for himself, and that his assertions and decisions amount to nothing but words, words; his constant presuming to judge for his readers, and to decide over and over again ex cathedra what I cannot do, and what I have done, proves his ignorance and incompetency to discuss the question that he so presumptiously took up, and that he is a disgrace to the editor's chair. In his last he sets off with—"The word of God cannot contradict His works." Who told the mongrel editor that? He never had brains in his empty skull to give an intelligent reason for saying so, he merely says so because I told him so in my third article. But he had not the honesty to give me the credit I can well afford to let him take it, seeing that he has only some half dozen words to fiddle upon, and if he should perchance lose them he will only be able to say bow wow, dog-like. I will take a credit mark, (not that there will be much honor attached to it) that I have been the means of convincing the Local editor that the word of God does not contradict His works. If by any means it is possible to penetrate his thick skull, I will attempt to convince him, with very little hope of success that,

"He who made the world and revealed his will to Moses,
Was not mistaken in its age."

I do not entertain very flattering hopes, neither do I expect to convince the Local editor that the word of God is truth; he is too stupid and ignorant. But I hope to afford, or communicate some information to the readers of the Argus to this end I would say—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," which science confirms—and which science cannot explain, but where science requires the aid of Moses—is that while the world and the universe are old, man is young, that his introduction into this world is of comparatively recent date, that after the general creation there was a chaos on earth, and that at one period no man could exist in it. This is not only confirmed by science but it is confirmed negatively by history which affords no notices of writings beyond the date of the Mosiac creation. It is confirmed by archaeology, or the study of antiquities, which finds no ruins of an earlier date. It is confirmed by the philosophy of progress, which supposes that, if man had been here longer than Moses teaches, the sciences, arts, philosophy, and general civilization would have been more advanced. Therefore the grand natural facts are certain, and stand out like an impregnable rock, proving the fundamental accordance of the Mosiac account of creation with the natural facts of the universe. This subject will be still more intelligently appreciated if we bear in mind the different terms employed in this history, they are "to create," to command something to be, as "let it be light," to "make" and to "form." The word make and the phrase "let it be," are equal in meaning, therefore, we shall notice only the other three, "create," "make" and "form."—The English sounds for all the corresponding Hebrew words are using the vowels broad like "aw" in law barah, "to create," asah, "to make," yatsar "to form." The first is calling things out of nothing, introducing the material into being, the second is shaping the material, the third is working them up with peculiar skill and care. So God "created" the heavens and the earth originally, brought matter into existence, "made or shaped the surface of the earth to its present state, "made" the animals out of existing materials, "formed" man, displayed the perfection of his skill in the construction of man, who is by philosophers called a microcism or epitome of the universe, (Does the Local editor's thick head comprehend this? We should love to see him trying his hand to dispose of it upon scientific principles,) and that these are the meanings of the words will appear from a little consideration. First "barah," "to create," though like all other words used in a secondary sense, as in Gen. 1; 21, where it means making, it is throughout the history in all other cases distinguished from "making."—The word "asah" "to make" is obviously introduced as a distinction, thus in the case respecting the six days formation, as a reason for the Sabbath, it is said to be given because of those six days God is described as having made the earth and the heavens in six days, Exodus 20; 11, and Exodus 31; 17, "God made the firmament," (Gen. 1; 7,) i. e. cleared the atmosphere of the chaotic fog and darkness. He "made two great lights to illuminate the earth, (v. 16, 17,) that is, caused them to shine again into the world, (v. 25,) "and he made the beasts of the earth." The end of his six days work is described Gen. 11; 2, God "rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made" that is, fashioned and arranged. In Gen. 11; 3 the entire work is embraced, "which God has created to make." Here the terms are plainly intended to convey different ideas,—originating the matter, and putting it into shape. (But what is the use of me talking to a fool though I should "bray him in a morter among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.") This explains the alleged creation of light before the sun. "God said let there be light," that is, let the light shine in, which has by the curtain of chaos been shut out. This was a partial change of the atmosphere, to admit light through, by the 14 and 18 verses, on the fourth day, the sun's orb is seen and he resumes his old sovereignity, from which during chaos his rays had been expelled. Now he is "made to shine upon the earth," appointed to his old territory to rule, as the moon is now to rule the night, never again to be dethroned or deprived of this portion of their ancient empire. In conclusion I would say: Let the Local editor leave out of his vocabulary that half-dozen words (if he does he will have nothing to say,) that he prates over like a parrot. I mean his filthy slang which cannot be picked up only in some filthy brothel, and betake himself to argument, by making the attempt to refute the argument that I have presented above, or any of the arguments that I have advanced before. I don't mean contemptible bombast, but argument and let your readers judge between us. Don't tell them that you can do it, and that I am "not competent to conduct an argument." Your subscribers can read no doubt. Why not let them judge, and not attempt to act as disputant and umpire both?

Odell with brazen face and empty skull
Thy country's sorded pest, thy readers fool,
Glad would I be to learn thee, but alas!
I'll never try again to teach an ass.
I'll crop thy ears and tail, then turn thee out
The sport of boys, they'll raise the laugh and shout
To see thy mangled ears—upon thy rumps,
They'll gaze with horror on thy bleeding stumps.
They'll run thee up and down the town and then
They'll chase thee to thy Printing shop again,
Draw thy form thence but still the hue and cry
Will follow faster than thy shanks can fly.
They'll prick thy sides with pins as they run after
Thy shaggy form, and crack their sides with laughter
When thou hast pleased the brats and they can find
No more in thee to please the fiddish mind
I'll take thy battered carcass, try my skill,
And pound thee in a mortar or a mill.
I can't bray ass I know with all my pains
What donkeys all should have, poor silly brutes,

Surely thou didst never visit Parnassus
Thy scribblings is of such a doggerel kind.
If thou didst I must conclude the Muses
Must all be either drunk or blind.

Who placed thee in the editorial chair?
Vacate the seat, I'll place within a bear.
It shall do all thou does't with lesser cost,
And if it does not, still naught will be lost.
Thou didst but growl, and can no more the growl too!
He'll harder growl than thee and all thy crew.

Let me not hear from thee again, by Jove!
I'll do more for thee than I've said above.
"Pagan or god of wood" in me thou'll find
All that's required to quiet thy dwarfish mind.
Learn to be useful, seek some fitter trade,
Follow the plow or use the polished spade.

Odell, farewell; remember that they say
The cat will mew, the dog will have his day.
Thou too like them will have thy little span
To play upon the stage the ape, or man.
Good bye. I say—I'll never heed thy calls,
Says "Ecce Deus," the "Fellow at Beaver Falls."

The National Bonds.

The Secretary of the Treasury addressed a very important letter to a gentleman in New York in relation to our finances, of which the following, a correct copy:

Treasury Department, Oct. 7 1867.

Dear Sir: Your favor of the 4th inst, is received. Too much importance is attached to the utterance to which you refer. The people of the United States are all sound upon the question of the preservation of the national faith as they were upon the question of the preservation of the Union. I consider the faith of the Government pledged to pay the five-twenty-bonds when they are paid in coin.

There need be, I think, no apprehension that they will be called in at the expiration of five (5) years from their respective dates and paid in United States notes.

The United States notes were issued under the pressure of a great necessity, and are by authority of Congress, being rapidly withdrawn from circulation. No more can be issued under existing laws, nor can I believe that any considerable number of the members of Congress would favor an additional issue for any purpose what ever, much less for the purpose of paying bonds in violation of the express understanding under which they were negotiated.

The policy of contracting the circulation of United States notes adopted by Congress and being steadily pursued by the Secretary, should it itself, even if the honor of the nation were not involved in the question, satisfy holders that five-twenty bonds will not be called in and paid before maturity in a depreciated currency. Very truly yours,

H. McCulloch, Secretary.

Grant and the Presidency.

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.—The Morning Post has the following special dispatch from Washington:

Upon the retirement of Dr Lieber from the office of Rebel Records he wrote to Gen. Grant, congratulating him upon his success, and saying that it was rarely that history ever devolved upon one man so many great civil and military responsibilities. He felt it was possible a greater crisis was coming than that which ended in Appomattox Court-House, and he prayed he might be strong enough to accept the responsibility.

Grant's letter in reply is said to be the most Radical he has written. In it he says he trusts he may have strength to answer any responsibility that may devolve upon him. No matter how solemn it may be, he will not hesitate to accept it if the country demands it.

In regard to the town of Jackson, Ohio where all the voters, 409 in number, voted the Democratic ticket, the New York Commercial remarks:

"We had occasion to travel through that portion of Ohio a few years since, when a colporteur informed us, as the result of his observations and inquiries, that but one in thirty of the people could read, while on an average only one in fifty-five possessed a Bible."

No sermon is required to enforce that text.

Major General Pleasaton has tendered his resignation, which has been accepted, to take effect on the 1st of January next.

FORT PILLOW.

Rebel Gen. Forrest Disposed of.

A while ago the rebel General Forrest "broke silence" in his own defense in connection with the Fort Pillow butchery. He put in the claim of injured innocence, asserting there was no such killing—no such butchering as had been represented. Mack J. Leaming writes to the New York Times a communication, which disposes of these statements. We quote as follows:

Not desiring in the least degree to be egotistic, or to subject myself to that charge, I deem it proper here to state the rank and position I held at the time of the capture of Fort Pillow, in order the better to enable the public to judge of the opportunities which I had of knowing the facts as regards the Fort Pillow affair—if I may be allowed to use so mild an expression—and for no other cause. I was the First Lieutenant and Adjutant of the Thirteenth West Tennessee Cavalry, commanded by Major W. F. Bradford. Major Bradford commanded the garrison most of the day, Major J. F. Booth, who was the ranking officer, having been killed about 9 A. M.

As Post Adjutant I had charge of the correspondence which took place under the flag of truce sent by Forrest, about 3 o'clock P. M., relative to the surrender of the garrison. That correspondence, as published in the report of the Congressional Investigating Committee, is substantially correct, with but one exception, viz., it omitted to state the threats which Forrest actually made in both the communications, in these words, to-wit: "If this demand is not complied with, you must take the consequences." Having confidence in our ability to hold the fort until reinforcements arrived, we refused to surrender, never dreaming that pending the negotiations under the flag of truce, Forrest, by violating all rules of civilized warfare, had treacherously gained positions from which he could successfully assault our works.

This, however, proved only the prelude to the chapter of horrid atrocities which he and his friends had in store for the Federal garrison after its capture. That the massacre of our troops which followed was deliberately premeditated and planned, I believe, as I believe in the existence of a just God, who will punish the perpetrators of this wholesale murder of unarmed and many of them wounded men. I was myself deliberately shot down after I had surrendered, and while lying on the field where I fell saw a number of wounded men deliberately shot. All this occurred after the fort was in entire possession of the Rebels, and when our men had entirely ceased to offer resistance.

These atrocities were renewed early the following morning, when two unarmed, helpless wounded Federal soldiers were shot within thirty feet of where I was lying at the time. I at the same time heard shooting going on all around the fort, but this occured in my immediate sight and locality.

In conclusion, I would say that I have by no means a desire to present my personal wrongs and sufferings before the public and but for the fact that I am the only surviving officer of my regiment—the only regiment of white troops that participated in the defence of Fort Pillow—I should have remained silent upon this occasion.

Mack J. Leaming.

The Cantan Tragedy—Death of Mrs. Caroline Hoffman—Suicide of the Husband and Murderer—He Hangs Himself in His Cell.

Canton, O., October 21, 1867.

Mrs. Carolina Yost, nee Hoffman, the woman who was stabbed in church last Sunday by her divorced husband died Saturday last. Hoffman, the murderer, hung himself in his cell last night. He had tried yesterday to kill himself by bumping his head against a wall, and his feet had been chained as a precautionary measure, but he managed to burn a hole in a board partition with the stove poker, and tearing the sheets of his cot into strips, twisted them into a rope, which he passed through the hole around the side of the partition and around his neck. The body was standing square on the floor when found this morning, and although his neck was somewhat stretched, it is evident his feet were not entirely clear of the floor, unless he drew them up while hanging himself. His suspenders were twisted into a cord and tied tightly around his neck also; a handkerchief was drawn closely around his head and over his mouth; indicating that he attempted to suspend or strangle himself with them.

He was left suspended in his cell till this afternoon, when the body was taken down and buried. Citizens had free access to the cell all forenoon. Some blame is attached to the jailer for not securing the prisoner so as to prevent his taking his own life. He has expressed a wish of late that his wife would live, but at first only wanted to hear she was dead and then he would be satisfied.

The Copperhead Victory.

Very much indeed like the premature rebel victory of Early on the 19th of September, 1864, is the Copperhead victory of Tuesday. The true-hearted men who voted the Republican ticket, and who are now upbraided and assailed by every traitor and every sympathizing traitor, North and South, have only to remember that they will soon have another opportunity to try their mettle on a more extended field, and for a grander prize. The historian states that when Sheridan discovered his army in retreat he did not reproach them, but, swinging his cap, with a cheery smile for all, he said: "Face the other way, boys; face the other way; we are going to lick them out of their boots; and now we are going back to our camps. We are going to get a twist on them; we will get the tightest twist on them yet that ever you saw; we will have all those camps and cannon back again." Thus he rode along the lines, and rectified the formation and animated the soldiers. Presently grew up across that pike as compact a body of infantry and cavalry as that which a month before had sent the enemy whirling before them through Winchester. His men had faith in the contest, and knew he was going to beat the victorious foe. His presence was inspiration, his commands were victory. Not only have we Sheridan to lead us, to cheer us, to reform our broken columns, but thousands if not as brave, at least as conscientious and resolved as himself; and when the word is given to advance, let traitors and traitor sympathizers beware. —Phila. Press.

The Herrald says "Mrs Lincoln has threatened to retaliate upon her assailants, by the publication of certain letters damaging to their self-love. She has been most grossly and unjustly assailed, and has certainly the right to defend herself. Such a carrying the war into Africa would raise some stir in the Republican party."

It is to be hoped Mrs. Lincoln will be deterred from nothing she can do. Having ruined herself, there might be some compensation in killing off half a score of leeches who hung upon Mr. Lincoln for offices and contracts.

The York Democrat has the following: William H. Gerbrick, late a soldier in the 16th Iowa, desires information of his father and mother, Jacob and Mary Gerbrick, formerly of Somerset and York counties, Pa. When last heard from, in 1847, they were in Pittsburgh, Pa. Any information will be gladly received by their son, William H. Gerbrick, Chicago, Ill. All papers in the United States are respectfully requested to copy.

Iowa has given a noble lesson to Pennsylvania. Further away from the Capital of the Nation she saw more clearly the importance of doing her full duty towards the country at large, and rolled up a heavy Union majority. The returns thus far give the Republicans 16,000, which will doubtless be swelled to 20,000! All honor to Iowa. —Pitts Gazette.

The United States Government has been induced by Gov. Chamberlain, of Maine, to provide means for the return to their former homes of the suffering Joppa colonists.—Maine newspapers report that the Governor has been in communication with Secretary Seward for some time on the subject, and has just received a letter stating that the Government would proceed at once to offer its aid to the unfortunate colonists. This will, we trust, be the last time that people from the New World will attempt to colonize the old one.—The march of empire and of colonization is not in that direction.

The Illinois Staats Zeitung indorses the nomination of Gen. Grant for the Presidency It comments on the recent article of the Galena Gazette, and says: "No one who is acquainted with public opinion in the West can doubt that the declaration of the Gazette will find general support. Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota will be unanimous for Grant in the National Convention, and this is a great step in advance, for of the other candidates there is hardly one that can begin with more States than his own."

The Cops have gone back on Andy since the elections and Andy has done likewise with them. Both parties have resolved themselves into a mutual admiration society.

In the Republican State Convention at Baltimore, a resolution was adopted sixty-four to seventeen, recommending the nomination of General Grant for president.

Adjutant General.—Prior to the adjournment of the Legislature, Gov. Geary appointed Col. D. B. McCreary, of Erie, Adjutant General. A Tragical End.—In the Argus of last week the details of a horrible stabbing affair, in Canton, Ohio, were given. We refer to Hoffman, the person who, followed his divorced wife into one of the churches of that place, and with a large knife inflicted sixteen stabs upon her person. A gentleman of this place who was in Canton on last Monday informs us that Mrs. Hoffman died of her wounds on last Saturday night and that on the following evening the murderer put an end to his own existence, in prison, by hanging himself with a sheet. Thus has ended one of the most fearful tragedies we have been called upon to chronicle for some time past.

A Sad Occurrance.—On last Friday morning a sad accident occurred near Darlington, this county.—A little son, aged about six years, of Mr. William S. Wallace, while on his way to school in company with his brothers, stopped at a neighbor's house for a few minutes. While there, the neighbor's son took a gun out of the house to shoot a ground squirrel, and while in the act of crossing a fence, the gun was accidentally discharged, and the load passed through the body of Mr. Wallace's little son. He lingered in great pain for a few hours, when death came to his relief. We learn that he was a very promising child, and that the accident has cast a deep gloom over the entire neighborhood.

Highway Robbery.—The Washington Review of the 16th inst., says:

Between nine and ten o'clock on Friday night last, James McDonough, who recently removed from this place to Somerset township, was attacked by two persons, while on his way home from town, between Robert Doak's and Mr. Henry's (on the road leading to Beesley's-ville), about six miles east of our borough. One of the villians held his horse, while the other two pulled him off and rifled his pockets of between two hundred and eighty-nine and three hundred dollars. They turned the horse loose, and threatened to shoot the Doctor if he attempted to come to town to give the alarm. He made his way to Mr. Doak's, and procuring a horse there, came here and made known the particulars of the affair; but notwithstanding efforts were at once made to trace the robbers, no clue could be obtained to them.

A Tame Affair.—The Lost Cause Jubilee in Bridgewater on last Friday night is said to have been a very tame affair. Little or no enthusiasm was manifested by the crowd. Some few individuals, however, are said to have "felt their oats" to a helpless extent, and had to be hauled in buggies to their respective residences. Those who did not partake of the "ardent" spirits freely came away in a bad humor, believing that the demonstration was gotten up entirely for the benefit of our clever friend, the landlord at that place, who seems to have made a "big thing" out of it.—How long may he wave?

The Old Maid's Wish.

Oh, wear no wedding wreath for me,
But make a good, strong cup of tea,
Connubial joys are all too light;
In these I could take no delight,
An easy chair, a book to read,
A poodle white, is all I need.
Then weave no wedding wreath for me,
But put the kettle on for tea.

Let foolish girls delight in beaux,
Mustache black, and broadcloth clothes,
Bright boots, of patent leather sheen,
And starched cravats, blue, pink and green;
One fig Friscilla would not give
For any "feller" that doth live.
Then weave no wedding wreath for me,
But put the kettle on for tea.

Then let the servant girl prepare
A supper good with needful care,
And steep the aromatic leaves
From China brought (as she believes),
Then shall my laugh with triumph tell,
And when I hear the supper bell,
I'll cry, No wedding wreath for me,
But come and take a cup of tea.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Henry Veon, Esq., whose death was announced a few weeks since, was born in Darlington township, in this county, on the 24th day of September, 1835, and died in same township, Sept. 21st 1867, lacking three days of being thirty-two years of age.—His father, Henry Veon, is one of the oldest citizens of the county, an intelligent farmer whose honesty, quiet unobtrusive manners, many virtues and moral worth have ever commanded the respect and love of his neighbors and acquaintances. He and his wife, Barbara Veon (one of the excellent women of the earth) have lived upon the farm, where their son, the subject of this notice, was born and died, for half a century, reared a large family, and now when verging close upon eighty years of age, enjoy good health, possession of all their faculties, the reward of virtue, and industry, and can look back upon well spent lives and forward to the reward of the christian. I refer thus early in this notice to the parents of the deceased because to understand their characters, is at once to understand and appreciate his character. His parents were his first teachers, and by them he was instructed in the principles of industry, morality, honesty, truth and generosity, from which he never departed. He attended the common school of his district, until about fourteen years of age, when he entered the Darlington Academy, and remained for two terms. S. B. Wilson, Esq., now of the Beaver Bar, was at that time principal of the Academy, and had succeeded in building up a flourishing school. At eighteen years of age, he commenced teaching a district school, and continued for ten years to teach in the Winter and work at home, on the farm during the Summer. For the three or four succeeding years, he devoted all his time to the school room, and was successively principal of the Fallston, Brighton, Freedom and Beaver schools. He excelled as a teacher. And in ability to govern a school and impart instructions had, in the opinion of the writer, few, if any superiors. While teaching in Beaver, he commenced the study of law, and about one year ago, having passed a creditable examination, was admitted to the Bar. His health partly gave way about the time of his admission to the Bar, owing to his labors in the school room, and his close application to his studies. But after resting a short time at home he sufficiently recovered to enable him to begin the practice of the law. During the few months he was at the Bar he made a favorable impression and had he lived his industry and application would at least have secured for him a respectable position. At the June Term of Court he complained of his throat and in a few weeks afterwards his friends saw he was slowly but surely sinking in consumption of which he died. He was conscious until the last and died with christian resignation and with the christian's hope. Having known him intimately the writer can say truthfully that there were few young men who possessed more virtues and fewer vices, were more disinterested and warm hearted in their friendship, whose impulses were more generous, and private life and character more pure, than Joseph Henry Veon's.—Through life he was the most dutiful of sons and as his father said to the writer, "seemed to live for his aged parents." This is the highest encomium that could be passed upon a young man and with it we close. A FRIEND.

Escape of Prisoners.—On Monday morning of last week, four of the prisoners, in the Venango county Jail, fell upon the keeper, overpowered him, took his keys and revolver from him, and escaped from the building. Two of them have since been captured.—The two still at large are named Francis Hidinger, aged 27 years; hight 5 feet 8 inches; smooth face, hazel eyes, dark clothes; (greasy) and G. W. Hopwood, aged 33 years: hight 5 feet 6 inches; bright blue eyes, light red hair: red moustache; wore snuff colored pants, dark cloth frock coat, white shirt, light plug hat.

Sheriff Gray offers a reward of $100 for the capture of each of the parties named.

J. R. HARRAH, Secretary.

Teachers' County Institute.

EDITOR ARGUS: I regret to learn through the last Argus, that there was a misunderstanding with some of our teachers in regard to the time for holding the County Institute.

At our public examinations we gave notice that the probable time for our Institute would be the third week of October, and if held at that time previous notice of the same would be given through the county papers. Notes were also made on many of their certificates subject to, the same arrangement. As we could not be ready for the Institute at that time, and no public call had been made for it in accordance with the above arrangement, it was deemed unnecessary to give public notice of the postponement.

As soon as circumstances will permit, the usual call for the county Institute will be made through both county papers. S.S. Jack and Prof. Langley of the North West Normal school, and others are expected to be present as assistant instructors.

Teachers holding Prof. certificates and believing themselves entitled to permanent certificates will please present the necessary testimonials.

It is expected also that there will be a convention of school directors on one of the days of the Institute to appoint a committee whose business it will be to select a uniform series of text books for the county.

Very respectfully yours

The Most Exciting and Interesting Book ever Published!

THE HISTORY OF THE SECRET SERVICE.

BY GEN. L. C. BAKER.

Late Provost Marshall of the War Department and Chief of the National Detective Police.

UNPRECEDENTED SUCCESS!

Over 80,000 Copies Sold in one Month!

THIS WORK EMBRACES AN AUTHENTIC AND OFFICIAL ACCOUNT of the hitherto suppressed facts and information obtained by GENERAL BAKER during his five years services as Chief of the National Detective Police. It was announced more than a year ago, but owing to the attempts of the Government to suppress it, its publication was delayed. It is now being issued, UNABRIDGED and UNABRIDGED, UNDER the SUPERVISION of GENERAL BAKER.

The author's well-known confidential and intimate relations with Mr. LINCOLN and his Cabinet, and his numerous personal adventures, has made his name as familiar to the American people as those of our most distinguished Military heroes. The little information and meagre accounts of his operations derived from the newspapers of the day, have only awakened a more intense desire in the minds of the reading community to learn still more of the mysteries heretofore hidden by the curtain of official surveillance.

This book effectually lifts the veil of secrecy and lays bare their inward recesses to the inspection and criticism of the world.

The MORALS of the National Capital are THOROUGHLY ventilated, and there are some STRANGE REVELATIONS concerning HEADS of DEPARTMENTS, Members of Congress, FEMALE PARDON BROKERS, and Distinguished Military Characters.

It contains the only official History of the ASSASSINATION CONSPIRACY, from its conception in the haunts of vileness to the burial-place of Booth.

For thrilling interest, these marvellous narratives of GENERAL BAKER collect the famous experiences of FOUCHE and VIDOCQ, and possess the rare merit of truth for their recommendation, being all attested by the highest official authority. Now that the war is over, and the plea of "military necessity" can no longer be urged as an excuse for withholding the important facts connected therewith, it is both fitting and just that the people who spent their treasure and shed their blood for the preservation of the Union, should have its inner history presented to them by the official and sole custodian of the Archives of the Nation's Secret Service.

The work is for subscription only, and cannot be had except through our regularly authorized traveling Agents. Subscribers will not be obliged to take the work unless it corresponds with the description in every particular.

I have on hand different patterns and styles of Engines, Fire Clay Rolls, and am prepared to make or repair all descriptions of machinery, on reasonable terms.

PLOWS AND PLOW CASTINGS.

I have all the best plow patterns that suit this market, among which is the "Great Western," which has been the plow of the county for the last fifteen years. There are five sizes of this plow, all of which I manufacture and keep for sale; also "Patent Lever"—right and left—"Mountain King"—right and left—"Side Hill," and nearly all the different kinds in use.

COOKING, FRANKLIN AND HEATING STOVES.

Having made several important improvements on the "Climax," by which coal or wood can be supplied without lifting lids, and having two places for pipe, either or both of which can be used at the same time, with a ventilation to the oven, thus having the advantages of a Cooking Stove, Bake oven and Franklin Stove combined. This Stove has been in constant use for twenty years, and many of them after being used for this period of time, are now in good order. There is but a small portion of this stove that ever burns out, and this is easily and cheaply replaced. To make them still more lasting, we are now putting in tile or fire brick lining. Our other patterns are the Enterprise, Keystone and Premium. Parlor Stoves, large and small heating Stoves, Franklin Stoves, Jenny Lind's, &c. Grate and Grate Fronts, Fenders, Iron Railing of various styles, Wagon Boxes, two Irons, Tire Benders, Corn Shellers, Force and Cistern Pumps, Sad Irons, Metal Sinks for kitchen, Sheet Iron and Tinware, always on hand and made to order. In fact, I manufacture and keep for sale, almost everything wanted in the machinery or hardware line.

In addition to our other Stoves, we are now making two new patterns, No. 7 and 8, of the Great Republic which are taking captive the best cooks and housewives in the country.

Second hand stoves always for sale cheap. Two good new engines, suitable for saw-mill or shop purposes now on hand, and will be sold reasonable.
